Party Of The Second Part

One thought about that new sea-level canal in Central America keeps coming to the top ever since President Johnson said the United States intended to augment the outgrown facilities of the Panama Canal.

The thought is about the treaty that will have to be negotiated with Panama, or whatever Central American republic is lucky enough to be transformed from jungle into the site of a world trade route.

There should be no more repetitions of the Suez fiasco that made a hero of the Nasserites and the Panama backlash that turned Uncle Sam into an image of Simon Lagree in Central America.

The Central American country chosen for the new canal site will have everything to gain and nothing to lose.

Its people will have something better to do than commiserate with one another. They will have opportunities to improve their lot in life.

They will have better schools, housing and food than they ever dreamed of before. Even if the new canal were to go through Panama itself, the aggrieved and ungrateful Panamanians would have a net gain from the second unearned increment in their national and individual wealth in the 20th century.

But unless the treaty process is handled with finesse, agitators will be back at their favorite trade of smearing the United States with foul names and dirty

They will blame this country for everything from wigglers in their water supply to the wantonness of the local teen-

Whatever treaty or treaties must be made should be offered in the form of contracts for U. S. approval - and one clause in the proposed contracts should state that any smearing or slandering of the United States as the party of the second part should carry with it an obligation on the party of the first part to make monetary awards, the same to be collected from the authors of the smears and slanders wherever possible, otherwise from the government itself. It doesn't make any sense for these installations costing hundreds of millions of dollars to expose their builders to insults and grabs by every little tin-horn politico and rabble-rouser who can think of nothing better to do with his mouth.

Hope For The Future

The cigarette industry invokes a new self-policing advertising code on Friday. Cigarette advertising is going to be almost reticent. About the most any tobacco company will say for a cigarette is that it's a smoke. For those who remember the slogans of another day, the new gentleness will be ironic

The industry's concern for its public image goes back to the Jan. 11 report of the Public Health Service on smoking and health. The report shocked the public briefly. The Federal Trade Commission on June 24 ruled that cigarette labels and advertising should warn Americans that smoking "may cause death from cancer and other diseases."

Meantime, on April 27 the nine major tobacco companies which manufacture all but a fraction of the cigarettes marketed in this country had agreed to a self-policing arrangement. Robert B. Meyner, former governor of New Jersey, was established as the "czar" of the industry. Meyner on Dec. 17 gave a foretaste of the new standards. The general tendency is to avoid testimonials by athletes or other celebrities and to bar anything that might make smoking attractive to youth.

The Department of Agriculture estimates that total consumption for all of 1964 will be more than 498 billion cigarettes-a drop of only two per cent from last year's 508 billion. The trade expects a rise in 1965, spurred by charcoal filters.

An active campaign against cigarettes by the British government has failed to discourage smoking to any great extent. Smoking in this country also has steadily increased in the seven years which have produced numerous anti-smoking studies

In concentrating on youth, American parents seem to be saying they won't quit smoking themselves and hoping for the best for the oncoming generation.

The Inimitable Lausche Touch

His announcement that he will give away his $7,500 salary increase puts Ohio Sen. Frank J. Lausche back in the running as the best news-getter of his political generation.

Sen. Lausche has a sure-fire technique. It is news when a man bites a dog. He waits until he is certain of getting attention, then bites a dog.

No one ever bit a dog more spectacuofficial a few hours before Christmas Eve that he would stop Santa Claus at the chimney and give him the name of a worthier beneficiary. Sen. Lausche says his salary increase may be turned over to a worthy college. He explains he will not turn it back to the government, because the government would only spend it. He will pay his Social Security and federal income tax on the increase, deduct these from the $7,500 and give away the rest.

This would give him the option, if he chose, of deducting whatever remains from his taxable income as a contribution to charity.

It would give a less scrupulous public servant than the unimpeachable Ohioan the option of claiming he is opposed to the pay raise as a matter of principle, then fast-shuffling his personal bookkeeping to make it appear that he has refused to take it, while taking it and giving it to one thing and another, even as the rest of us when we get pay raises.

The big difference is that we have nothing to gain by announcing we are opposed to pay raises. We love 'em. We'd vote for them if we had a chance.

The Lausche touch of news genius never was defter. We can remember nothing like it since 1950 when he said he would be neutral in the Senate race between U.S. Sen. Robert A. Taft and Democratic candidate Joseph T. Ferguson.

Helping To Meet A Payroll

fashion?

We share columnist Sylvia Porter's puzzlement about tipping.

She wrote recently that she had been embarrassed hundreds of times because she didn't know how much she was expected to dole into the waiting hands of doormen, bellboys, waiters, maids, etc.

Whereupon Miss Porter asked the chairman of the board of a hotel chain to straighten her out. The result adds to our confusion.

If tipping is so regularized that the chairman of the board of a hotel chain can reduce it to a table of fixed charges, why shouldn't the fixed charges be in the overhead of the establishment whose emploves are getting paid by tips?

Why should a customer be required by a questional social custom to meet an em-

Nothing can be done to stop tipping. It makes some people feel good to hand out money they don't need to people they believe are in need of it. Other people like the sensation of dispensing largesse; it makes them feel important.

The rest of us, who have no money we don't need, and get no thrill out of dispensing largesse, will have to join Miss Porter in her puzzlement.

Except that we aren't going to ask the chairman of any board of a hotel chain what to do. We'll tip when and if we feel we owe for a special service that does not come under the heading of anything we have a right to expect as a matter of commercial routine.

leader." The situation is somewhat reversed today in the case of Vice President - elect Hubert Humphrey. He is given enthusiastic support by the "liberal" elements in the Democratic party, while many independent voters feel that at heart Lyndon Johnson is a conservative. Now Mr. Johnson, as the elected president for a fouryear term, has announced that he will delegate to Mr. Humphrey certain responsibilities for coordinating various governmental activities in connection with the new civil rights law. This is one way to satisfy the civil rights groups pressing for action and to remove any suspicions that the President might slow down their projects for equal employment or intensive integration in the schools on equal treatment in hotels, restaurants, theaters, and other "public accommodations."

IT'S INTERESTING to note that the liberals expect Vice President-elect Humphrey to exercise considerable influence with President Johnson, just as the latter was supposed to do with President Kennedy.

The role of Mr. Humphrey, of course, will be to try to improve the liberal position. wheras Mr. Johnson in 1960 was presented as sympathetic to conservative principles in the hope of holding the South.

Now that five states in South have gone Republican and there is a rift inside the Democratic party, it's an open question how far President Johnson is willing to let Sen. Humphrey go in achieving some of the liberal goals of the Democratic party.

News Conferences

By James Marlow

WASHINGTON The Constitution doesn't require presidents to hold news conferences but President Johnson, like his predecessors, is holding them. His are different from theirs.

No one can say his way isn't working out well for him, 13 months after he took office, since at this point it isn't clear why Johnson thinks it's necessary for him to be different.

But there's a pretty good explanation for why his way hasn't caused him trouble. He hardly ever says anything that would. Conflicts set up roadblocks and so far Johnson seems to be making a career of not creating them.

In this sense he is up till now the most noncontroversial president since Calvin Coolidge.

Presidents Franklin D. Roosevelt, Harry S. Truman, Dwight D. Eisenhower and John F. Kennedy all held so-called formal news conferences. Eisenhower less often than the others. The formal kind is announced long enough before time for all the newsmen in Washington to go, if they want to. There the president is wide open to any kind of question and his answers become a matter of record. This serves the double purpose of letting the president get his ideas out to the public while letting the public get a close-up look at him. Kennedy, the first to hold news sessions on live television, did a brilliant job. This helped build up the popularity of a man who had won the presidency by a hair in 1960.

Roosevelt thought he got as much good from the newsmen's questions as they did from his answers. He used to hold two conferences a week.

Johnson has almost entirely eliminated the formal kind of meeting with the press. In Washington he usually, and suddenly, calls together the newsmen assigned to cover him and trots around the White House grounds with them, answering them as he goes. The suddenness of this peripatetic conference leaves out scores of newsmen who would like to be present if they knew there was going to be a conference-on-the-trot. Their absence also limits the number of questions that are asked. Or Johnson calls in reporters at the White House or his ranch, either individually or in selected groups or just those who happen to be around, and then talks to them in one of three ways.

1. On the record, meaning anything he says can be attributed to him.

2. Off the record, meaning nothing he says can be used.

3. Background, meaning what he says can be used so long as the reporters don't say he said it. This can have strange, almost weird results.

Instead of being able to say what they write came from Johnson himself, they say the President thinks or hopes this or agrees or disagrees with that.

If all this is baffling to newspaper readers, it's equally baffling to reporters who weren't at one of these background conferences and have to read about them later.

-Junior Editors Quiz on Music

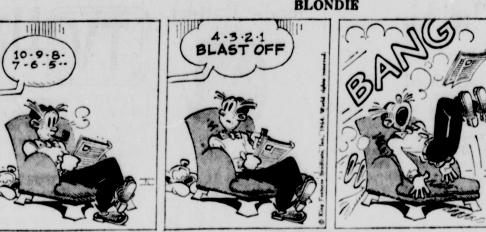

QUESTION: How did flats and sharps come to be used in music?

ANSWER: We are accustomed to think of musical scales as being based on groups of eight notes (octaves), but when musical notation was being worked out in the 10th century, the groups had 6 notes and were called hexachords. They represented our notes C-D-E-F-G-A. These can all be played on the white keys of the piano. Try them and you will find each note is a full tone (two semitones) above the other except for the interval between third and fourth-for F is only one semi-tone above E. Then, musicians wanted to start hexichords from F. But here was a problem! Start with F and the interval between third and fourth notes is a full tone instead of the half one as in the C hexachord. The musicians decided there should be a sign to put near B in such a case, which would show it was to be lowered by a half step, or softened. B had been shown by the sign at upper right; the sign to show B was to softened was drawn with a rounded shape and became our modern flat. When one wanted to come back to the first B, the "natural" sign was to be used - we still use these today. Sharps were invented in the 1500's to show a tone was to be lifted a half step. We show the original cross sign, then the sharp sign as we use them today. Sharps and flats gave so much richness to music that they soon became used for other notes besides B.

Susan Miller of Norristown, Pa., wins today's combined prize of Compton's Illustrated Science Dictionary plus $10 cash for this question. Mail yours on a postcard to Junior Editors in care of The Review and you may win the weekly grand prize of Compton's Pictured Encyclopedia.
